REVOLT IN THE GREAT WEST.

Coincident with the announcement that there is in this country for the unblinking purpose of writing a "Western" opera comes the news that the people of Wyoming have risen in revolt against the "Western story." With the picturesque enthusiasm of the peak and plain, organizations very like vigilante committees are being formed to wait upon the tenderfoot who confess that they have come West to get "local color" for their stories, and send to convince these members of the "pot holders' union" that there is something mightier than the pen. The Western legend is a patient, but he wants stories and plays that are mirrors in which he can see himself. It is no wonder that he is tired of seeing Southerners and Easterners and people who belong in every other place but the West palmed off on him as the exponents of the Western life. A man from Virginia or New England cannot put on the West with a pair of snappys and a gun. He must have behind him more than his liquids and his nasals. The Westerners are quite right in "bucking."—Kansas City Journal.

FANCY PRICES OF ANIMALS.

A spinster with money to burn recently paid $5,000 for a bulldog. A man in Massachusetts has just bought a cow for $8,000. Walter Garvey has a hog for which he refused a cash offer of $4,000. James Keene offered $20,000 for a rooster of fashionable blood priced at as much as $800 each. You can buy a fine blue and silver tiger for $700. By and by we shall have a craze for breeding fishes, and a fine male salmon, educated to bend like a tiger for $700. The $8,000 cow has one calf a year, worth $4,000. The female salmon may become the mother of 20,000 little fellows in the same time, worth in the aggregate, possibly, as much as the calf.—New York Press.

CORCORAN GALLERY CLOSES ON MONDAY

This Afternoon the Last Opportunity to See Contest Pictures.

This afternoon will be the last opportunity to enjoy the collection of contemporary paintings in oil, popularly known as the First American Salon, which has occupied the Corcoran Gallery of Art since February 6. Tomorrow the Corcoran Gallery will be closed and will continue closed until the paintings now on exhibition have been removed on the permanent collection augmented by the thirteen pictures purchased by the gallery from the present exhibition have been placed upon the walls.

It is probable that some eighteen or twenty of the pictures from this exhibition will be shipped to Pittsburgh, to form a part of the great international exhibition which will commemorate the dedication of the new art gallery connected with the Carnegie Institute. If the success of an exhibition is to be measured by the attendance and it seems that this is by far the most reliable standard of judgment, then there exists no further reason for doubt upon the degree of interest in art matters which this exhibition has aroused. It is probable that the total attendance will exceed the 60,000 mark, and yet there will be thousands of people in this city who are fond of art works who will probably fall from one reason or another to see this memorable collection of leading American art works.

The attendance has not been that of a curious people unacquainted with exhibitions of this class. This is demonstrated by passing through the different galleries and catching occasional words of commendation and of criticism. The visitors, many of them, are sincere lovers of art, and studiously disposed. To such the advantages of such an exhibition is of incalculable benefit. The broad scope of the exhibition, the equal standing of all schools of art, the high standard of exhibited examples of the best work of leading artists, has made this exhibition an up-to-date school for the observant and discerning. Its influence upon future art conditions will result in a better art appreciation with the masses, and a memorable feast of good things to those possessed of a keener discernment of beauty.

If the success of the exhibition is to be measured by the number of sales and the amount received therefrom, there is much to encourage the artists who have exhibited. At the close of March 6 sales aggregating $47,000 had been made. This represents the price affixed to the entry cards upon the twenty-three paintings which had been sold at that date. Of this number the Corcoran Gallery has purchased thirteen paintings. The sales of this week are No. 175, "The Lonely Sea," a spirited marine with stirring waves and a threatening sky, by D. J. Gue, E. W. Redfield is again fortunate in the sale of a picture, No. 262, "Lowlands of the Delaware." This picture was awarded the Y. E. Flaxen prize, and the bronze medal of the Corcoran Gallery. All of the prize pictures have been sold. No. 192, "The Magic Forest," by Irving E. Coussé, a wood interior with two figures of Indians, is among the sales of this past week. Ernest Lawson's "Aequeduct at Little Falls," No. 292, a medium-sized picture, in composition and good in color, is also sold.

MISS BERTA HANSON WORKS ON PORTRAIT

Miss Berta Hanson has commenced a portrait of a mother with her young child. The canvas is of medium size, and the arrangement, while somewhat conventional in pose, is compensated by the different types represented, and the simple costume, which, in the composition, the mother is dark, resembling the women of Italian parentage.
